

Peru Street Kid Party

One of the most fun evenings we had during my recent visit to Peru was organizing a party for the kids who live on the streets in Iquitos, Peru. A few hours before the dinner and party were to take place we walked the streets and gave out invitations to the secret restaurant where the dinner would take place. The kids then needed to arrive at the restaurant with their invitation to attend the dinner.

This year 20 kids attended the dinner of roasted chicken, salad and french fries. A birthday cake was served for dessert. After dinner each of the kids received a Peruvian soccer jersey (Peru was playing New Zealand in the World Cup). The kids also received a school backpack.

This dinner is one of the many projects we sponsor in Peru. It is always a special surprise for the kids and an enjoyable way to help out someone who can use our support.
